Headline:
Turning colder and unsettled over the next few days.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloudy this evening with some drizzle possible. A band of light rain moving southeast towards midnight. This clearing most areas later, giving a touch of frost, especially in north-western areas. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Thursday:
A largely cold and bright start with sunny spells. Becoming cloudier, especially over Norfolk, with blustery showers here. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Conditions turning very unsettled Friday and Saturday with gales, rain or showers, these perhaps wintry at times especially on hills. Winds easing through Sunday, showers continuing in east. Feeling cold.
